Forest Fires Run Riot

Four CCC Boys Die In Nevada Blaze; Five Northwestern States Menaced

OGDEN, Utah, July 29—(AP)—Trapped by raging flames, four Civilian Conservation Corps enrollees died and a fifth was missing in Nevada tonight as forest and brush fires menaced vast sections of western timber land.

The area, extending over several states, was timder dry from weeks of drouth and searing heat.

Lightning, flashing from rainless thunderheads, killed one man in Oregon and added to the fire hazard.

Fifth Feared Dead

The four CCC youths burned to death when a brush and timber blaze they were fighting in the rugged Santa Rose mountains of northern Nevada shifted suddenly and cut off their retreat. Frank J. Vitale, 20, Brooklyn, N. Y., was missing and feared dead.

The badly burned bodies of Ernest R. Tippin, 21, Oswego, Kas.; George Kennedy, 22, New York; Frank W. Barker, 20, Brooklyn, and Walter James, 18, Ridgewood, N. Y., were taken to Winnemucca, Nev.

Pacific northwest fires, 85 of which were started by lightning, spread over thousands of acres of timberland, but most of them were under control.

Temperatures which soared as high as 117 degrees moderated, but the fire menace continued as clouds failed to bring rain.

Funeral Will Be Monday For Clyde Gilbert

John Clyde Gilbert, for eighteen years pressman for the Sedalia Democrat, died at 11:15 o'clock Friday night at the family home, 923 South Barrett avenue.

Mr. Gilbert was on duty at the Democrat office Wednesday, and that evening accompanied Mrs. Gilbert to Dresden where they attended a chicken supper. As they were preparing to return to Sedalia, he became ill and a physician, called to their home, found he had suffered a stroke. He was seriously ill from the beginning and early Friday evening became unconscious and passed away a few hours later.

Mr. Gilbert was born in Hannibal and would have been 47 years old on August 10. He began his newspaper work there, entering the employe of the Hannibal Courier-Post when he was fifteen years old. Learning the trade there, he later worked on the Kansas City Star, and on papers in Tulsa, Okla., San Antonio, Tex., and other places.

He was married in Hannibal to Miss Marie Kisner, who survives him, as do two daughters, Mrs. L. V. Holloway, Fayette, and Mrs. Earl M. Freund, Sedalia. Also surviving are two grandchildren, Betty Eileen Freund and Lyle Garland Holloway, and two sisters, Mrs. Dora Bales and Mrs. Laura Walters, both of St. Louis. A brother, Edward Gilbert, died in St. Louis in April.

Mr. Gilbert was a member of the East Broadway Christian church and for several years has been superintendent of the Sunday school department. He was a member of Granite Lodge, No. 272, A. F. and A. M., R. A. M. No. 18, and past patron of the Order of Eastern Star.

Funeral services will be at the Masonic Temple at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon and interment will be in Memorial Park cemetery.

The following friends will serve as pallbearers: Ambrose McVey, John Taylor, Henry Shepherd, James Settles, Adolph Glenn and George H. Scruton.

The body is at the Gillespie Funeral Home where it will be until the funeral hour.

Mr. Gilbert's aunt, Mrs. Sam Blackshaw, of Hannibal, arrived in Sedalia Saturday, as did two friends of the family, Mrs. C. C. Powers, St. Louis, and Mrs. Clarence Neace, Independence.

Pettis Farm Tour Examines Five Different Homesteads

Visiting five Pettis county farms, the annual county farm tour Friday saw examples of yard improvement and good soil and practices such as crop rotations, terracing, contour planting, liming, the use of fertilizers, the growing of legumes and grasses and supplementary pastures, and also discussed phases of the farm family food supply through a good garden.

The following places were visited on the tour: L. E. Durley farm, George R. Wilkerson farm, J. C. Longan farm, P. S. Read farm and Olen Monsees farm.

The tour started at the Durley farm, one of the soil conservation service's demonstration farms, where a long-time farm plan has been set to conserve and maintain fertility as well as to furnish feed required for livestock.

Corn On Contour

The visiting farmers saw examples of corn planted on the contour, second year red clover that has made a hay crop and a seed crop ready to harvest, and grasses and legumes, including sweet clover, that was seeded this year with small grain.

Mr. Durley said that his sweet clover had done better on barley than on any other small grain, that barley was his best nurse crop.

O. T. Colman of Columbia, extension specialist in soils, said that lespedeza was cheap and easy to grow, and that it was primarily a pasture crop to furnish pasture during the middle of the summer. Mr. Coleman said that lespedeza will grow on a lower level of fertility than red clover.

"The soil is like a bank account," Mr. Coleman said. "You can't continually grow the same crop without replacing some of the things it takes out of the soil such as nitrogen, phosphorus, potash and calcium." Mr. Coleman referred to conturing as a cheap way of saving soil. "Anyone can contour without cash outlay," he said.

Wilkerson Farm

Next stop on the farm tour itinerary was the George Wilkerson farm which was a well arranged farmstead with a spacious lawn. The good stand of blue grass was kept that way by careful mowing.

The tour examined Mr. Wilkerson's ½-acre home garden, which he said returned more profit than any other 10 acres on the farm. The garden arrangement included small fruits, blackberries, apples, grapes and cherries. It was so arranged that cultivation can be done by horse drawn implements.

In discussing the garden, Mr. Wilkerson stressed the importance of well-rotted manure. Also remarked on were the varieties of vegetables and succession plantings, insect control and heavy fertilization before plowing.

Mr. Wilkerson said that on his farm the fences were put on the contour and that the steeper land was seeded to grass and only the more level land cultivated. Fences on the contour permit the farm operator to plant and cultivate on the contour.

State Hybrid Test Plot

Another thing examined on the Wilkerson farm was one of the eight state hybrid corn test plots, and other fields of Midland Yellow Dent corn. The touring farmers also saw a new strain of soybeans that have been developed from Virginias and a field of 19604 lespedeza.

Tells Police They're Pals; Gets 20 Days

A man, found in the rear yard at the home of Dr. A. G. Hausam, 115 East Sixth street Friday night, believed by police officers to have been pretending he was deaf and dumb, looked up at the officer who shook him and said, "You're a good pal; policemen always are. You'll let me out of jail in the morning."

The man had in his pocket a petition made out under the name of James G. Byers, stating that the bearer was left speechless and deaf after an illness of spinal meningitis, and that he was soliciting funds to start a shoe repair shop. There was also a small notebook supposedly used to write notes to persons to whom the petition was presented. There were several signatures with amounts adjacent.

It was noticed by the police, also, that he carried a letter addressed to J. A. Eckert, and one of the names on the petition was J. A. Eckert, with 25 cents, paid, next to his name.

Saturday morning the man pleaded guilty, verbally, to being intoxicated, and was sentenced to twenty days in the city jail by Magistrate C. W. Bente.

He was given a stay of fifteen days, but must serve five days assessed against him.

FDR In Big Run Of Marlin–But Luck Is Poor

OCEAN CITY, Md., July 29—(AP)—President Roosevelt was "smack dab in the middle" of the biggest run of marlin spearfish in middle Atlantic sport fishing history this afternoon, with 40 bots all around the yacht Potomac constantly hauling in trophies.

Capt. Chester Gray, aboard the Hilda, reported by short-wave radio that the presidential craft was over the jack pot, a shoal 22 miles off shore. The sea, he said, was literally "alive" with marlin.

At latest reports, President Roosevelt had not hooked into one of the doughty sea fighters.

The executive was fishing from the Potomac's stern and did not transfer to a smaller boat.

With the day less than half gone, Capt. Gray reported the fishing fleet had boated more than 40 marlin.

Capt. Gray said this year's run of marlin was "unbelievable." Boats were getting two and three strikes at a time, and were losing gear as lines fouled and outrigger gear snapped under the savage assault of the white marlin.

Actress Denies Doing 'Dance Of Seven Veils'

LOS ANGELES, July 29—(AP)—Film Actress Bettie Butler, giving a deposition in her breach of promise action against Former Director Al Rogell, denied today performing a "dance of the seven veils" at her apartment before five men.

"Didn't Mr. Mills, manager of the apartment house, frequently warn you about noisy drinking parties, and didn't you answer the door wearing only a negligee," asked De Forest Home, Rogell's attorney.

"Possibly I did answer the door in negligee. Mr. and Mrs. Mills were frequent visitors, but not to warn me about noise or drinking," she said.

"Didn't Mr. Mills once find you in negligee in your apartment with five men, and didn't you explain to him that you had been doing the 'dance of the seven veils?' "

"Certainly not," replied Miss Butler. "I didn't do any kind of dance for them."

The 24-year-old actress demands $125,000 from Rogell on her contention he proposed to her, then married the former wife of Producer Jack Warner for whom he once worked.

Farm Tenant Loans For Saline County

Saline county will be among the additional 19 Missouri counties to which the National Tenant Purchase program will be extended during the current fiscal year, the regional office of the Federal Farm Security Administration in Indianapolis announced.

Nineteen other counties in the state designated last year have been renamed but loans in those will be fewer. The tenant purchase program permits 40-year, three per cent loans. This year's allotment for Missouri is $1,259,951.

Admiral Has Faith In His Navy's Power

Retiring Chief Says Expansion Plan Can Meet Defense Needs

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—Admiral William D. Leahy retires from the navy Tuesday confident the billion-dollar fleet expansion he helped engineer will meet the nation's first line defense needs for many years.

The graying chief of operations predicted today that "if we carry out the program we have set up we should be equal to any defense problem that is likely to confront us."

"Only Great Britain has a comparable fleet now or building and we have no reason to expect trouble from the British," he observed.

Prediction Conditioned

His prediction was conditioned upon other nations making no radical spurts in warship construction during the 10 years estimated necessary to replace obsolete American vessels and increase total naval tonnage by 20 per cent.

At the end of a colorful 46-year naval career, Leahy will turn over his high navy post to the younger Admiral Harold R. Stark. Then, without a vacation, he will take on the civil administrative job of being governor of Puerto Rico. He intends to devote two weeks to personal matters before sailing September 6 for San Juan.

President Roosevelt's unexpected award of the Distinguished Service medal to Leahy on Friday, for "extraordinary qualities of leadership and administrative ability" capped a career that included participation in virtually every American war or campaign since the 1898 Spanish-American conflict.

Farmer's Temperament

The retiring admiral is a matter of fact as a dirt farmer in his native Iowa—and as little like the ordinary conception of a military man, in speech or manner.

In the World War Leahy won the Navy Cross for transporting troops. As commander of the cruiser St. Louis in 1921 he had the responsibility of protecting Americans and their interests during the war between Turkey and Greece.

More prosaic peace-time duty with the fleet, and as chief successively of the bureaus of ordnance, navigation and operations, rounded out the service of this officer who, as "Bill Leahy," finished 35th in his class of 49 at the naval academy.

Claims Damages At Roller Rink

Claiming that a metal buckle on a roller skate broke causing him to suffer a severe fall, Earl C. Schmutzer of Sedalia, yesterday filed suit in the circuit court against Harry Zimmerman, asking $750 for injuries allegedly received at the Zimmerman Roller Rink in Liberty park on January 9, 1939.

The petition states the plaintiff went to the roller rink with the intention of skating and after paying his admission, was presented with a pair of roller skates customarily used in such skating.

The skates had a leather strap fastened by a metal buckle, the petition claims. It further states that when Schmutzer started to skate the buckle broke, loosening the strap and causing him to fall on the floor.

He received a badly sprained right wrist and arm, according to the petition, which made him lose time from his work.

Tarkington Doesn't Want Mussolini's Job

KENNEBUNKPORT, Me., July 29.—(AP)—"I wouldn't change places with Mussolini for any reason."

Booth Tarkington speaking provoked by what he termed the "singular coincidence" of Benito Mussolini's natal day celebrated to the plaudits of thousands in Italy.

"I have led a nice quiet life, which is more than he can say," said Penrod's creator, on his 70th birthday, observed quietly in this picturesque fishing village.

Tarkington settled in an easy chair aboard the beached packet schooner he uses as a summer workshop and announced if he "had to do it all over again" he'd prefer to be a painter.

"Writing is made out of cobwebs, and after you're through, what is there to look at?" he philosophized. "Yes, the painter's life is the most interesting.

Dickinson's Aide Doesn't 'Catch' Jokes

Governor Complains Girl Secretary Is Too Serious-Minded

LANSING, Mich., July 29.—(AP)—Luren D. Dickinson, Michigan's octogenarian governor, tonight coupled a recipe for staying young with a complaint that his 19-year-old girl secretary fails to "catch" his jokes.

The veteran crusader against vice and "high life" drinking, in his weekly written "sermon" to his constituents, gave this formula for retaining youthful spirits:

Regular habits, freedom from worries, a religious outlook, new friends, association with young people and the ability to appreciate a good joke.

Secretary Too Serious

Dickinson said blond Margaret Shaw, whom he once characterized to a church gathering as the "ideal secretary," heaven-sent in answer to prayer, was "too serious" for her age.

Serious or not, however, he told newsmen, she's still the prefect secretary. "I'm not going to take back anything I've said along that line."

Miss Shaw was a member of the party which accompanied the governor on the trip to New York that supplied him with material for lectures on the drinking and "high life" he observed at the National Conference of Governors.

In his statement tonight, issued on the eve of his scheduled appearance at an old-fashioned camp meeting in Lake Odessa, Mich., Dickinson recounted his ability to make friends among younger people and his zest for a joke—"I can say that I lay up a good one and wait for the time to spring it," he said.

Didn't Get His Jokes

Admitting that he got "quite a kick out of" his own jokes and declaring that "this makes you feel young," Dickinson told newsmen he had "quit trying" his jests on Miss Shaw.

"At the first trial," the governor's statement said, "the young lady looked as though she were going to sniffle at the joking climax. That didn't make me feel young."

"The next time I tried it," he went on, "she didn't catch the joke until four o'clock the next day. That doesn't help you to keep young.

"She is getting too serious. She has grown from a girl to a woman of mature judgment in a short time. She has grown from inexperience to one of thorough efficiency. These are unusually valuable to the state, but if I am going to get any fun in springing jokes on office girls, I will have to pick out a new one."

Sedalia Bids For Central Office Of State Commission

Offers To Erect $150,000 Building For Unemployment Compensation Body

The City of Sedalia is going to have the State Unemployment Compensation Commission's new headquarters located here if it is at all possible, and with that in mind has submitted a proposition to the state unemployment compensation commissioners which certainly should be given the deepest consideration.

The proposition, which includes a promise to erect a $150,000 building which would be furnished to the commission rent free, was taken to the office of the commission in Jefferson City by Mayor Julian H. Bagby and James T. Montgomery, local attorney.

The commission's offices are now in Jefferson City, but several weeks ago it was decided to look around for new quarters because of the inadequacy of the present building. Other cities saw in this a chance to secure the new headquarters, where several hundred persons are employed. Among them were Mexico, Columbia and Sedalia.

Sedalians Try Hard

Sedalians interested in the movement made frequent trips to Jefferson City in an attempt to have the new headquarters located here. The two cities with the most chance in the fight for the commission's offices appeared to be Jefferson City and Sedalia.

Then, some weeks ago, the Missouri legislature passed a bill which provided that the unemployment commission's headquarters be permanently located in Jefferson City if it provided new quarters satisfactory to the commission.

But Sedalians have continued to put forth every effort to make this city as attractive a location site as possible. Friday's offer exceeds any made by other cities and it is hoped the commissioners will give it sincere consideration.

Local Bid Follows

The Sedalia proposition follows:

"Mr. Andrew J. Murphy,
Mr. Edward Crow,
Mr. Harry Dressler,
Members Unemployment Compensation
Commission of Missouri,
Jefferson City, Missouri.
"Gentlemen:

"The City of Sedalia is herewith submitting to you a proposition for the location of the Unemployment Compensation Commission's headquarters in Sedalia.

"We are filing with your commission seven copies of the plans and specifications of the building we propose to furnish your commission, drawn by L. P. Andrews, Architect, Sedalia, Missouri. These plans and specifications have heretofore been approved by your commission, namely Andrew J. Murphy, Mr. Patterson and Mr. Rogers.

Rent Would Be Free

"We propose to your Commission that Sedalia will erect a building in accordance with the plans and specifications herewith submitted and deliver the possession of said building as speedily as the same can be erected, free of rent or any other charges except light, heat and power. If any other city can beat this proposition, let them have it.

"J. H. BAGBY,
"Mayor of the City of Sedalia, Missouri."

The proposed building is planned to meet all the requirements of the commission and its employes.

Tells Story Of Terror On Sinking Ship

Crowded Lifeboats Saved; Examples Of Heroism, Tragedy

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29—(AP)—The first hand account of the death and horror attending the burning and sinking of the Bokuyu Maru was brought here today by the captain of the ship which rescued 209 persons from the far Pacific's shark-infested waters.

Three other persons died.

The Bokuyu Maru burned, exploded and sank 3,900 miles west of San Francisco on the morning of July 18. The rescue ship was the oil tanker Associated, en route from Manila to San Francisco, commanded by grayhaired Captain L. E. Hawkins of Oakland, Calif. The Associated arrived today.

Boats Full To Brims

He first knew the Bokuyu was in distress when the vessels were 80 miles apart. He was making full speed toward the burning craft long before his messages to other ships in the area had been answered. He came on four lifeboats of "exhausted, thirsty and hungry people of all ages, packed tightly, with children tucked under seats."

One boat had a dead man—Second Officer Chira. There were a dozen injured. Some climbed to the tanker by a rope ladder; others were lifted aboard by chairs and cots. They had been afloat in the lifeboats about five hours.

Left behind were a stewardess and a three-year-old child whose fate never was determined. The stewardess was last seen putting her life preserver on a youngster and pushing him overboard.

Captain Hawkins was informed the chief officer and chief engi-

A Thin Straw On Whirling Waters

In August, 1914, when war burst on an unaccustomed world, America scarcely believed the news from Europe. It was all so remote, so unreal. The newspapers spread their daily revelations like scenes in a hectic drama, and the first days of the World War unfolded like a play before a fascinated American audience.

We have had a lot of education since then. First, the world is changed, changed utterly from that pre-war world that believed in the honor of the pledged word in international dealings as in personal affairs. Many people actually believed that a great nation which had solemnly pledged its word to respect the neutrality of a small neighbor would do so, even to its disadvantage.

We know better now. The war which began 25 years ago, and all the dealings since, have established the new international morality, that a nation does what its leaders conceive to be a good idea at the time, and every man now shares the astonishment of old Bethmann-Hollweg that a nation should insist on the validity of "a scrap of paper." Even Britain, which chose so to regard the guarantee of Belgium, is now revealed as less meticulous about Nine-Power Pacts in the Pacific.

The United States knows now that when Europe brews war-broth it may well serve it piping hot at any time. We are serious about the European situation today, we study it as we never did in 1914, for we know that no stupidity, no blunder, no irresponsible and headlong course is too mad to be unthinkable in Europe.

That is why people incline to listen carefully when they learn of the New Federal Unionists, a group now forming to seek to advance the plan of a world-wide federation of democratic nations. It is a thin, small straw on the whirling waters of the world today, but many will grasp at it with the desperation of the drowning, for today we know what we did not know in 1914—the waters are deep and treacherous.

The idea would be to unite free nations in a union bound together by guaranteed civil liberties, mobile and united defense, stable money, an immense free trade area, and facile commerce and communications. such a coalition would be so powerful economically and defensively, that it is felt others would wish to enter the union, which they would be welcome to do on meeting the conditions.

Perhaps it is a somewhat filmy dream but it is to the credit of the world that people are still left in it who will not resign it to a dog-eat-dog future that can result in nothing but a new Dark Ages.

How far this movement will get, no one can say. But it is launched at a time when thoughts turn naturally back to August, 1914, and review in sadness the results of the era launched in those dread days.

Nine Million Acres

During the past five years, the federal government has bought nine million acres of poor land. How good the land was can be guessed from its price, averaging only a trifle over $5 an acre.

This vast acreage gives another hint of the way in which the face of the country is being remade. Most of the land is being used for national forests, grazing, recreation and wild life refuge,, Indian reservation, or leasing to state conservation agencies.

The hope is that it will be of more use to the national economy in this form than when it was being farmed by desperate farmers unable to get a decent living on it. Only the future, and with careful study at that, can show whether the national balance-sheet on so vast a venture is in the black.

Pact With Panama

There is every reason to be glad that the long-pending treaty with Panama, clarifying the rights and duties of both the United States and that country in case of world wars or disturbances, has at last been ratified by the Senate.

The United States has done well to make concession, to yield on disputed points, for the world needs today the example of a powerful country willing to arrange amicably with a weak neighbor their mutual interests. There are countries in the world which would probably not bother to negotiate with Panama, but simply move in a military force and do as they like.

The world may well listen to President Arosemena of Panama as he says, "With the putting in effect of the new treaty there will be initiated an era of frankest comprehension based on spirit and justice in the special relations between the two countries." We hope and believe President Arosemena is right, and that the example will not be entirely on the world.

• The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — The recent appointment of three new Presidential secretaries illustrates one of the most significant trends in American government—the growing importance of the White House and the part it plays in the tendency toward centralization of government.

The trend under Republican Presidents, has gathered momentum under Roosevelt.

There was a day when William Howard Taft held leisurely court in the residence part of the White House. The executive offices were not even built. There was a day also when genial Joseph P. Tumulty, ably handled all of Woodrow Wilson's intricate problems without assistance.

That, however, was two and three decades ago. And it is doubtful that even Mr. Tumulty, efficient as he is, today could cope with all the many ramifications of White House business.

Calvin Coolidge was the first to start building up White House secretariat. He had two secretaries, Everett Saunders and Ted Clarke. Hoover upped the number officially to three, unofficially to four. He added a man for contact with Congress, by name, Walter Newton, ex-Congressman from Minnesota. In the background also, he maintained a research man or ghost writer.

Roosevelt continued the three-man secretariat of Hoover until the death of Louis Howe, whom he never really replaced. But now, with the passage of a new act by Congress, the White House will add six new secretaries, three of whom have just been appointed.

As a result, here is the official line-up of the Roosevelt corps of assistants:

Marvin MacIntyre, officially the secretary to Roosevelt, but actually on leave and not expected to return.

Steve Early, in charge of press relations.

General Edwin M. Watson, secretary in charge of appointments, replacing MacIntyre.

James H. Rowe, newly appointed, who will handle research, correspondence, and be a general utility man.

William H. McReynolds, another new addition, who will handle personnel problems.

Lauchlin Currie, also new, who will act as economic adviser.

"Passion For Anonymity"

Whether by accident or deliberate design, it happens that the three new aides beautifully fulfill Roosevelt's definition of a White House secretary. They have a genuine "passion for anonymity."

Although long holding important niches in the Capital, they are almost unknown to the general public. Few people even in Washington, knew, for instance that young Jim Rowe, unofficially has served as a White House secretary for more than a year. He believes in holding his candle under a bushel.

Unique member of the new White House team is William H. McReynolds, 59 years old, who has proved that it is possible to climb to the top of the government ladder through Civil Service. If McReynolds has any particular politics, no one knows what they are. He may be a Republican.

Roosevelt picked him for his ability, not his politics, and he will help iron out personal questions throughout the Administration, a problem, incidentally, which has been sorely neglected.

McReynolds was born in Wilson County, Kansas, punched cattle in Texas, clerked in a store in Oklahoma, and became a court reporter in Battle Creek, Michigan. Then almost by accident he took a civil service examination for a $900 job in the Post Office Department and came out first on the list. The job paid $600 less than he was getting, but he took it "for the experience," as he told his boss. "I'll be back within a year," he said.

"I'll bet you a hundred dollars you never come back," replied his boss; and he won.

In Washington, McReynolds climbed to more and more important jobs, helped organize the Bureau of Efficiency, became a special assistant to the Director of the Budget, caught the eye of Henry Morgenthau who took him first to the Farm Credit Administration, then to the Treasury.

McReynolds works late every day except Saturday when he drops everything to play golf with his pretty 17-year-old daughter Kathryn, usually to be beaten. In the winter, however, he turns the tables by trouncing her at bowling.

Hot Dog Boy

James Rowe, youngest of the new secretariat, is only thirty years old, and comes from a background of Butte, Montana, mixed with Harvard. He went to Harvard Law school after trying to get a job as a newspaperman, and at Harvard became one of the Frankfurter favorites. He was rewarded with the job of being secretary to the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Rowe was Holmes' last secretary, and although the aged jurist was feeble, he gave his young assistant a post-graduate course in two specialties—law and profanity.

"At 93," reminisces Rowe, "the Justice was the champion cusser of them all. I worked in the Montana copper mines one year, but those fellows couldn't hold a candle to the Justice."

Later Rowe became secretary to Tom Corcoran, then to Jimmy Roosevelt, and has been holding down Jimmy's secretarial job in the White House ever since.

Tall, good-looking and shy, Rowe is married to Elizabeth Holmes Ulman, writer on the staff of the United Mine Workers Journal, and they have an agreement never to mention the word "liberal." Reason is that Mrs. Rowe once provoked a hot argument when she claimed she was the only real liberal in the family.

Canadian-Born Economist

One of the most significant appointments to the secretariat is Lauchlin Currie, crack economist of the Federal Reserve Board. Currie is the man who has prepared various economic charts for Roosevelt in the past and warned him of the impending 1937 recession.

This appointment also is without political background. If Currie is either Democrat or Republican, no one knows it. He was born in Nova Scotia 36 years ago, but when his father, a fisherman, died, Currie, then only four, was moved to Worcester, Mass. And except for attending the London School of Economics he has lived in the United States ever since. He married Dorothy Bacon, Boston landscape architect, who numbers five colonial governors among her ancestors.

Currie has been in Washington only since 1934 when he became one of the Treasury's experts on monetary and tax problems. A dynamo of energy, he once toured Europe on a motorcycle and was arrested 17 times for speeding. He works 14 hours a day and on week-ends drives 500 miles to spend Sunday with his family in New England.

Unlike McReynolds and Rowe, Currie had no inkling that he was being considered as one of the six new White House secretaries. The President had summoned him to discuss the self-liquidating projects program, and just as Currie was picking up his papers to depart, Roosevelt said:

"Just a minute, Lauchlin. There's one more thing. How would you like to be one of my administrative assistants. I think I can fix it up with Marriner to steal you."

"Swell, Mr. President," replied Currie blinking. "You can count me in if it's OK with Mr. Eccles."

Since 1917 when General Nelson A. Miles first recommended recognition of liability of the United States to survivors and descendents of Ogalala-Sioux Indians massacred by troops of the 7th U. S. Cavalry under Col. Forsyth, at Pine Ridge Agency, Wounded Knee, South Dakota, December 29, 1890, in one of the worst crimes committed against the American Indian, Congress is still trying to settle the matter. Testimony of Chiefs Turning Hawk, American Horse and many others is borne out by Baptiste Garnier (Little Bat), famous army scout, interpreter and plainsman who witnessed the affair. Upon being surrounded by the soldiers the Indians, who had been complaining bitterly because they were starving by shortage of rations, were told they would not be harmed. A rifle was accidentally discharged and the massacre began. In a moment death reigned on all sides and even women with nursing children were shot down unmercifully and butchered. When firing ceased the bodies of 90 warriors and 200 women and children were counted.

The site of Utica, New York, called in Oneida Indian language, "Yah-nun-da-da-sis" meaning "around the hill," is part of a tract of 22,000 acres which King George 2nd, of England granted in Royal Letters Patent in 1734, to a number of individuals, but in reality to Governor of province, William Cosby. The quit-rents reserved in the Patent having been allowed to remain unpaid, Chief Justice Daniel Horsmanden, of New York colony, directed the land to be sold in 1772 at public auction. It was bid in by General Philip Schuyler, General John Bradstreet, Rutger Bleeker, and John M. Scott.

In writing the words of the National Hymn "America" in 1832, the Rev. S. F. Smith was inspired by the tune "God Save the King," which he found among a collection of German songs and tunes. Shortly thereafter he gave the hymn to a Mr. Mason, who on the following 4th of July brought it to a children's celebration in the Park Street Church, at Boston, where it immediately became popular.

GHOST DETOUR

BY OREN ARNOLD

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday: The mining agent is cornered by Dick who wrings the truth from him—the agent is trying to scare the girls into selling—then Dick walks back into the ghost town jail. The girls watch all this as the agent flees.

CHAPTER XI

"DICK'S not the kind who would steal!" Roselee was declaring, once the girls were in bed that night. "Why would he take the money from the old shaft and hide it in the dungeon without telling us?"

"I don't like to think of him as under suspicion," murmured Christine.

They had watched Dick go back into the dungeon, and had seen the faint reflected glow of a flashlight from far back in the forbidding depths of the jail cells. Then, still crouching in the shadows, they had seen Dick come out empty-handed and go back down the street, and they knew he had concealed the money inside. The two girls had returned to the Ace High Hotel and gone to bed before 10 o'clock.

"I'm terribly upset, Christy. Honest I am."

"Roselee, do you suppose this man—Packman, wasn't it?—will try anything else? His mining company, I mean?"

"I don't know. But Dick will be on the lookout now, surely. He will take care of everything. He—he would have, I mean. What I mean—he"

Roselee was confused. Confused in her speech and—worse—in her own heart. Christine sensed it and shared it, and so reached out to squeeze her friend's arm.

"Tell me something, Roselee," she spoke tenderly. "Do you love Dick Bancroft?"

Roselee didn't answer. There was a long moment of silence and then distinct little sounds as of tears.

"You don't have to tell me, darling," Christine whispered then. "I know you do love him. I know how you feel now, too. I can't think he was planning to conceal the money from you. Why don't we go and ask him?"

"No!"

"At any rate there was some good news in it—the man said Goldcrest ore was valuable again. He even said there was a new outcropping worth a hundred dollars a ton, Roselee!"

"I d-don't . . . care!"

CHRISTINE was holding her friend's hand now as she lay there on her pillow for a long time, thinking. The hour wasn't late, and she thought back over all the events since school was out. She thought, too, of Roselee and Dick Bancroft—and of Franklin Larraway.

Franklin was gone tonight. Franklin had fallen for her, Christine knew, from the moment he had met her. A girl can sense such things, intuitively. It had been amusing then. Franklin was more boyish. Slender and rather shy, and unable to conceal his shyness with his forced geniality and banter. He was extremely loyal to his friend Dick.

Franklin had shown more and more refinement and lovability and intelligence as the days had passed. Christine had felt herself drawn to the larger, more commanding Richard Bancroft at first, just as Roselee had been. For one thing they had "discovered" Dick under dramatic circumstances, like a movie romance. There in twilight at the bank vault—goodness! And he was undeniably handsome. "But Franklin is every bit as good looking," Christy reminded herself now.

She wondered what had come over her. Somehow she had undergone a kind of spiritual change just lying here thinking. She wasn't sleepy. She wanted to think—to think about Franklin.

"And I made Franklin believe I was crazy about Dick!" Christine recalled, horrified now at the thought. "There, painting the signboard he tried to be nice—tried to let me know—!"

Now it was Christine's turn to cry, and she sobbed harder than Roselee had done, until both girls finally turned over their pillows and went to sleep in companionable misery.

* * *

MRS. HOGAN had a good breakfast for the three young people. At the table Roselee and Christine watched Dick expectantly, but he did not mention the previous night's affairs. The girls were keenly disappointed, especially Roselee. Dick had hidden the $12,000. Dick had secrets which he thought they didn't know, and he wasn't sharing them. Roselee's lovely face was dark with anxiety.

A few tourist automobiles were coming in by 9 and the young people had to serve as guides. It was Christine, though, who kept alert and at 11 saw Franklin Larraway's rattly old car coming across the joshua tree desert before she heard its noise. She joined her little knot of tourist guests with one of Roselee's and hastened to meet Franklin.

The young man's eyes brightened with obvious pleasure when she came to his car.

"Hello!" he said. "You look fresh as a dewdrop! Your new cowgirl outfit is very becoming."

She laughed a bit, happily. "Bring me anything, hmm?"

She asked it casually, teasingly, as a child might have, and just as casually picked up the parcel at his side. If she had given it a thought at all she would have assumed that the parcel contained something for use at Goldcrest. It was a natural assumption. They had had to buy a lot of odds and ends—tools, souvenirs, cooking utensils, items of clothing, provisions and such—on trips in to town. And in a thoughtless instant Christine had shaken the loose wrapper off this parcel too.

A calfskin purse, beautifully beaded, dropped out.

"Oh!" she cried, staring.

Franklin blushed, rather painfully. "Yeah," he finally managed, swallowing. "Yeah, I did. But you beat me to it, Christy. I—well I mean I forgot it was laying there on the seat. I intended to get it to Dick first."

"To—Dick?"

"Yeah, that's it! Dick! He, uh, he told me to bring it, for you, Christine. He's—well I guess he wanted to be nice and all, and I was going in to town, see? Maybe we better not tell him you've already seen it, see?"

Christine looked at Franklin, looked into his frank gray eyes. He was trying to be casual, trying to smile and laugh a bit. But Franklin wasn't a good actor and he wasn't getting away with it. Christine felt a sudden hurt within her. She knew Franklin was lying—she knew Dick hadn't ordered that purse! She wasn't sure exactly what really had happened, but her heart told her that things were all mixed up some way. She felt her throat tighten and she was afraid she was going to cry again as she had cried last night. So she turned hastily away.

"Oh sure," she forced herself to say. "Don't tell him. It's sweet of him to think of me, wasn't it? You—you better hurry up and come to work!"

She hurried off. Tears had actually come, and not for the world would she have had him see them.

Men Of Feathers Flock Together At World's Congress

Prize Birds In Spotlight At Cleveland

Pettis And Saline Counties Will Have Entries In Contests

CLEVELAND, July 28.—International neighbors are "leaning over the back fence" and chatting about their chickens here. Poultrymen, at least, have forgotten racial differences to exchange business suggestions and ideas.

The "ambassadors" who brought the boys together wear feathers instead of frock coats. They're prize poultry—chickens, geese, ducks, turkeys, pigeons—participants in the World Poultry Congress being held in the United States for the first time.

Three Missouri counties, including Pettis and Saline, have entries in the big show. Pettis county is represented by a 4-H poultry judging team, winner of the state contest, made up of Ruth Rose, 18, and Anna Catherine Romig, 17, both of the Dresden Poultry Club, and Walter McClure and Elizabeth McClure, alternate, 17-year-old twins from the Sunnyside Poultry Club.

Demonstration Winners

Saline county is sending the state prize winning demonstration team, composed of Mabel Fisher and Jane Jackson, Miami 4-H club girls, whose subject will be "Making Angel Food Cake and Egg Lemonade."

This show comes off only once every three years. So, when it comes, it's big. The 1939 congress is the seventh in history; it cost a million dollars, covers 20 acres on the shores of Lake Erie.

Six foreign nations provide the main sideshow attraction—an exhibit of 700 rare birds in the Hall of Live Poultry, a regular Bronx Zoo of poultrydom.

Dutch Ducks; French Feathers

Holland brings the ducks: bantam Qwakers, smallest of the species, valued at $100 a specimen. The Dutch also present a Golden Laced Crested rooster with blue shanks and a full, high crown of feathers.

The Salmon Faverolle chicken of France wears a natural muff around its neck and sports a beard—of feathers. Great Britain and Canada have sent "delegates." The majestic Cubalaya, national breed of Cuba, whose feature is a coat of many shiny colors, is on display.

Mussolini's Italy provides a surprise in a large array of pigeons. Particularly the white Romagnoli which looks just like that dove you see flitting about in the peace posters.

Minus Her Gizzard

America has a few fowl freaks too—like Lady Lime Crest, chicken without a gizzard, who was flown from New Jersey to Cleveland in an airplane. This hen is living without grit after her gizzard was experimentally removed by an eastern limestone company.

Primarily, however, the roles of 5,000 American birds at the congress are as entries in contests. Harry Atkins of Davenport, Ia., president of the American Poultry Association, has charge of the competitive program. First prizes are bronze medals—but they are more cherished than cash by the fortunate farmers.

Poultry experts have come from abroad to give free advice to Mr. John Farmer of the U. S. Dr. Ghigi is one. Dr. Karl Vetter of Berlin, agricultural official in the Nazi government and head of the World's Poultry Science Association, is another.

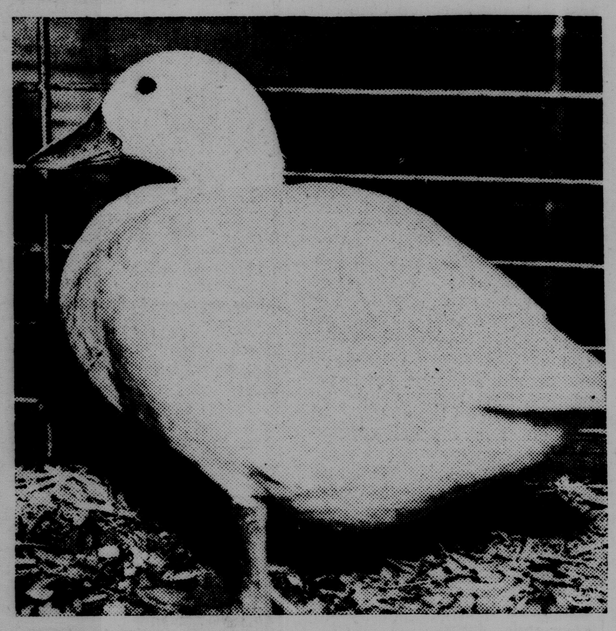
Madame Grovlez of France, noted woman poultry raiser, is still another.

The congress closes its 11-day stand on August 7. Before that date, almost a half million visitors will have passed through the turnstiles. They will have had a look at some 15,000 fowl, viewed educational exhibits.

Some Of The Prize Specimens From Foreign Lands

Head high, Holland's Golden Laced Crested appears proud of his fancy crest.

Dr. Willard Thompson, in charge of international live bird exhibit, holds congress "extremes." Big rooster is French Salmon Faverolie. Little fellow is Italian Ghigi bantam.



Solemnly Dutch duck. This qwaker is one of the smallest and rarest of duck family. Color of body is pure white. Bird is valued at least $100.

Italian good will ambassador: Romagnoli pigeon makes friends with American, Rita Kofron.

Wins Contest By Her Tap Dance

Miss Evelyn Ann Dunlap, tiny tap dancer of Kansas City, Kansas, who is visiting in Sedalia won first place in the amateur contest Friday night at Liberty park, Howard Fisher singing "Rattlesnake Daddy" was second place winner, Miss Mary Ann Johnson, another tiny tap dancer, was third place winner and singing "T For Texas." Miss Lueille Steele won fourth place.

Rev. O. J. Rumpf, pastor of the Evangelical church, made the address of the evening.

Judges of the contest were Harry Waldman, Ed Hixson and A. R. Bohon.

Other entries in the contest were the Fletcher sisters, Juanita Raines, Roy Cornelieus, Bobby Ellis, Bob Griffith and Junior Cramer, Shirley and D. L. Schlobohm, Mildred and Albina Davidson, Junior Wells, Lawrence Houk, A. A. Musslin and Allie Meyers of Syracuse, Mo., and Eugene and Neil Hayes.

Mrs. Don Anderson sang "There Will Be Sweethearts" as a special number. This number written by Horace Kessler, a brother of Albert Kessler, Missouri Pacific employee, and was sent to the Booster Club to present it in public for the first time.

Another special presented was the quartette from the First Baptist church composed of Aubrey Case, Clyde Waters, Bob Wild and Carl Yessen which rendered several selections.

These contests are sponsored by the Sedalia Booster Club and the final contest will be held August 11 when all of the first and second place winners will compete for the grand championship.

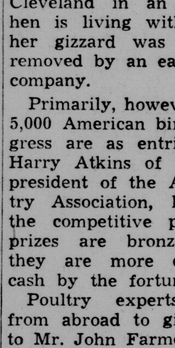
"NOT MUCH TO IT"

Such was the remark of a patient of mine after a treatment. Such, perhaps, is the opinion of many who do not properly understand it. A chiropractic adjustment appears to be a simple proceedure unless one knows all the factors entering into it.



Dr. Roy M. Keller

A vertebra may be out of position in a dozen different ways. A chiropractor must know exactly which way. A difference of 10 degrees in the direction of the thrust may mean the difference between success and failure, the same as in driving a nail, it must be struck straight or one cannot accomplish one's purpose.

A vertebra may be displaced due to another one in the opposite end of the spine. A chiropractor must know these things and while the actual adjustment may seem simple a patient cannot realize the many factors which the chiropractor must take into consideration before the adjustment. The chiropractor spends more time in study of the anatomical relationship of the body than any other profession.

It is not what we do that we are paid for it is knowing HOW to do it.

Jehoshaphat: A Life of Obedience

Text: II Chronicles 17:1-6, 9-12.
By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

In Asa we have studied the life and service of a king whose benevolent reign was founded in trust—in trust of God and of his people. Asa was the son of an unworthy father who had made so serious a mess of his own life and kingship that the kingdom had been disrupted early in his reign.

But Asa was more fortunate in the son who succeeded him, for he followed in his footsteps in every respect. Like his father Asa, Jehoshaphat had to face a major problem in the worship and ideals of the people. The vigor of the measures that he took to suppress idolatry indicates the hold that false worship had taken upon the people. False worship means false ideals and practices; and this was particularly true where the worship of Baal, into which the unfaithful were lapsing, was mixed up with licentious and debasing rites, and the moral practices that were contrary to the purity of family and social life upon which the supreme teaching of the teachers and prophets of Israel laid such emphasis.

There are times when the true king or statesman must show his strength and character and his capacity for service as much in opposing the popular trend as in expressing the will of the people. In our modern democracy where so much stress is laid upon majority rule, we are apt to forget that there are great moral and social issues that are never settled by mere majorities.

In the long run it seems fairly well established in history that majority rule is better than minority rule, and that the voice of the people may be more nearly the voice of God than the voice of some corrupt or self-seeking ruler or of some self-seeking ruling class.

But there are times when waves of popular debasement seem to sweep over a people. We have in fact stressed something of this in our recent American life. The immense increase of drinking and drunkenness, the widespread and deeply rooted development of all forms of gambling, the great increase of martial infidelity and divorce, with a general lowering of standards in relations between the sexes—these and many other things have been very acute problems in recent years.

* * *

The fitness of leaders is to be judged not by the extent to which they yield to popular clamor and demand, but by the firmness with which even at considerable sacrifice they stand out for integrity and decency. In the long run it is this type of leader who most truly represents the people and who becomes established in popular regard. Our national men of honor have not been the tricksters and the corrupt and self-seeking politicians, but the men who showed some allegiance to higher ideals of statesmanship and service.

Jehoshaphat was a king of this type. He did not believe that it was a king's part simply to give the people what they wanted. It was his duty, rather, to guide the people toward what was best and to suppress in every reasonable way everything that was making for the debasement of the people.

Majority rule does not alter the rigorous demands of righteousness, truth and justice. A task of democracy is to educate and train a people that these fundamental things become the basis of all thought and life.

WHY IT'S SO EASY TO OWN AN OPPORTUNITY FARM

WE HAVE LOTS of requests for details on Opportunity Farms. So many people want to know about the easy terms on which these farms can be bought.

It's as simple as this: You make a small down payment. Then figure 6% on the unpaid balance. This is the amount you will have to pay each year—and it covers both interest and principal payments.

The table on the right shows how small the yearly payments per $1,000 of unpaid balance can be.

Already we've helped many people to the ownership of fine farms. And their satisfaction in these farms is shown by the number of their friends they've encouraged to share in this opportunity! Why wait longer to get the facts about the farm you've dreamed of owning?

Every farm listed as an Opportunity Farm must have adequate, sound, weather-tight buildings, well-painted; improved soil, with good drainage, and expertly planned crop rotation. Every Opportunity Farm is a going concern.

YEARLY PAYMENTS per $1,000

YEAR	INTEREST ON BALANCE OF PRINCIPAL	PAYMENT ON BALANCE OF PRINCIPAL	TOTAL ANNUAL PAYT.

Britain Marshals Forces Against Late Summer Tension

Mobilization Of Navy Gets Under Way

Fearing Crisis, English Prepare All Armed Might

LONDON, July 29.—(AP)—Britain today marshalled her vast sea forces in fear of late summer international tension, prepared for military collaboration with Soviet Russia and showed an increasing tendency to resist Japanese demands in China.

Mobilization of naval power got under way as battleships of the home fleet sailed for training cruises and firing practice in advance of maneuvers, the biggest peacetime war games in British history, which are to begin in mid-August.

The maneuvers are scheduled to start after King George reviews the reserve fleet August 9 and to coincide with the period many observers believe will see mounting international tension.

Protest Again to Japs

Official quarters, meanwhile, said the British ambassador to Tokyo, Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, had been instructed to make representations to Japan against anti-British demonstrations which have continued during the Tokyo talks over British-Japanese difficulties in China.

Dissatisfaction was indicated in official circles over progress of the Tokyo negotiations and pressure for a stronger stand in the Orient has grown since the United States denounced her 1911 trade treaty with Japan July 26.

A statement in the house of commons on the protracted British-French-Soviet negotiations is expected from Prime Minister Chamberlain Monday prior to the last foreign affairs debate before parliament adjourns August 4.

Pre-Treaty Staff Talks

It was considered probable he would mention the possibility of starting military staff conversations among British, French and Russian generals even before conclusion of the projected mutual defense pact.

In a speech at Llandrindod, Wales, Wartime Prime Minister David Lloyd George attacked the government for sending "a clerk from the foreign office" to represent Britain in the Moscow negotiations.

William Strang, counsellor of the foreign office, has been in Moscow since June 14 participating in the talks.

Calling Soviet Russia "the greatest military power in the world," Lloyd George said: "If you want their help you ought to send somebody there who is worthy of our dignity and theirs."

They're Comin' To Town!

What a cast Jack Benny is bringing to town with him in his new gag-studded hit, "Man About Town," which Paramount will present locally on Tuesday for a three-day engagement at the Liberty Theatre. In the usual order they are: Betty Grable, Phil Harris, co-star Dorothy Lamour, the nation's No. 1 comedian himself, Isabel Jeans, co-star Edward Arnold and Binnie Barnes. The picture is a comedy with music in which Jack crashes English society in an effort to win the leading lady of his show troupe.

Recall Old Days Of Circus Trail

Some pleasant reminiscing was experienced by several Sedalians Friday when Harry Chipman, advance representative for Barnett Bros. 3 Ring Circus came to town . . . Mel Carl who now operates a tavern on South Ohio avenue, spent several years on the 'saw dust trail' and his father some fifteen years ago had a circus of his own that played the middle western territory. Also, A. J. 'Happy' Price, who has lived in Sedalia many years was formerly trainmaster with Miller Bros. 101 Ranch, Hagenbeck-Wallace, Sells-Floto, Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey and many other circuses met Chipman and as circus men would say 'cut up old times' as they had 'trouped together' many seasons and having not seen each other for 12 years.

An article in The Democrat-Capital recalled that the Wallace Circus visited Sedalia 40 years ago featuring the famous Nelson Family of aerialists . . . this year (40 years later) Barnett Bros. Circus comes with the celebrated Hartzells who are former pupils of the renowned Nelsons and reputed to be the greatest of this modern era.

'Men With Wings' in Technicolor at Uptown

The men who wrote the history of aviation in heroic letters across the sky during the past thirty-five years are glorified in the magnificent technicolor picture, "Men With Wings." Opening at the historic moment in 1903 when the Wright Brothers fly their first plane over the dunes at Kitty Hawk, "Men With Wings," tells the story of three young Americans whose lives are bound up with aviation and who share in its struggles, disappointments and triumphs over three decades. Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland and Louise Campbell play the three pioneers of the air who devote their lives to the progress of aviation from the day the girl's father is killed in one of the first airplanes. Caught up in the surge of aviation's first forward march, they are carried by it toward a destiny they cannot escape. The three leads, all of whom turn in brilliant performances, are ably assisted by a supporting cast of Hollywood experts. Andy Devine is a comic figure as the mechanic and Lynne Overman, as a wise-cracking reporter is another. Co-feature at the Uptown is "Little Orphan Annie" with Ann Gillis in the title role, supported by Robert Kent, June Travis, and others. Little Orphan Annie is just as real on the screen as in the comic strips.

Artillery Home Today From Training At Fort Sill

Sedalia's batteries of the 128th Field Artillery, Missouri National Guard, will arrive home today after a two weeks' period of training in camp at Fort Sill, Okla.

Saturday night was spent at Springfield, Mo., on the homeward journey.

Some interesting highlights on the camp are given in the follow-ing communication from Captain E. J. Hansman:

Paper Proves Popular

"Fort Sill, Okla., July 26:

"The Sedalia Democrat and Capital of last Sunday was the most popular thing in camp on Monday evening when the men found the story in that edition about the camp here. By the time the papers were passed through the hands of 86 men there wasn't very much left of them.

"The weather during the day time out here is extremely hot, in fact 110 to 112 is nothing and there isn't a bit of shade for miles while we are out on the range firing the big guns. Nothing but the bright, hot sun beating down on you. But so far no one has been over-heated and after the sun goes down the nights are very cool. In fact the blankets feel mighty fine before morning.

"We have had no trouble at all in getting the men up at 5 a. m. In fact most of them are up before the first call sounds off and from what I can see and hear it isn't the coolness, but it is because of hunger, occasioned by the cool nights. And they want their breakfast as soon as they can get it and from the way they have been eating throughout this camp some of them — in fact all of them — look like they have put on additional weight.

Thursday night we break camp as on Friday morning at 7 a. m. we leave here on our return march to Sedalia. Friday night we stop at Tulsa, Okla., overnight and camp in the grounds of the state fair. Saturday night we stop in Springfield, Mo. It was hoped that we would be able to stop over night at Warsaw but the distance from Tulsa to Warsaw is too great and Springfield will be our Saturday night stop. We will leave Springfield about 6 a. m. Sunday morning, arriving in Sedalia about 10:30 a. m.

Sweet Springs Farm Woman Turns Author

Leading short story in a recent issue of a well known farm magazine was written by Mrs. Eda Scott Henley of Sweet Springs, one of the most active farm authors in Missouri.

Mrs. Henley has written in her spare time for several years and won first prize in the playlet contest sponsored by the Missouri Farm Bureau Federation last year.

"Most of my life has been spent on the farm," says Mrs. Henley, "and for a few years I taught school. My chief pastimes used to be music and drawing, but about 10 years ago I began to devote by spare time to writing.

"Since then I have sold a number of articles to national publications, quite a few 'briefs' to several of the Capper publications and articles and sketches to various other magazines and newspapers."

Homemakers To Picnic August 10

The Prairie Ridge Homemaker's club met at the Prairie Ridge school house Thursday, July 27th.

Devotional was led by Mrs. Jason Chamberlin.

Roll call—Rules for Safety on the Highways.

In spite of the heat and busy season twelve members were present.

It was decided to hold the picnic at Liberty Park Thursday, August 10.

The 4-H club members will be entertained at Wildwood Tuesday evening, August 29.

The September meeting will be with Mrs. W. B. Wiley.

Threaten Mayor Smith And Six Councilmen With Recall

Affidavits Filed With City Clerk

Charter Party Moves To Oust All Former Boss Allies

KANSAS CITY, July 29—(AP)—The mayor and six Democratic city councilmen, all elected with the aid of the Tom Pendergast political machine, tonight faced the first positive threat of a recall.

The former Charter party filed affidavits of recall, the primary step in a move to oust the officials from office, today with Chas. W. Regan, city clerk, himself a veteran supporter of Pendergast.

Regan accepted the affidavits and gave H. W. Luhnow, chairman of the Charter party, a receipt for them. The citizenship qualifications of those who signed the affidavits will be subjected to a routine check. This completed Regan will be required to give them recall petitions for circulation among voters.

Want Smith Ousted

The affidavits asked specifically

The affidavits asked specifically for the recall of Mayor Bryce B. Smith, who stepped into power several months ago at the time Henry F. McElroy resigned as city manager, and the following councilmen: Ruby D. Garrett, Frank M. Eviston, Alfred E. Phillips, Chester Cooke, Charles H. Clark and Frank J. Adams.

The general accusations made against the city officials in the affidavits virtually were alike in the affidavits for each of the men. The reasons set forth in the affidavit for Eviston's recall are representative of the group and were stated as follows:

"He has during his term of office, neglected the duties of his office and misconducted his office of member of the city council, by acquiescing in and with other members of the city council permitting of control by a corrupt political organization over the business and affairs of the city, its finances, contracts, purchases, payrolls and personnel, resulting in a wasteful, extravagant and illegal administration of the affairs of the city."

30 Days to Circulate

After receiving the petitions from the city clerk the Charter party will have 30 days to circulate them for signing among voters.

The petition will ask for a recall election against the officials named.

The other members of the city council, A. N. Gossett, a Democrat, and Charles P. Woodbury, a republican, were not named in the affidavits of recall.

Meanwhile, Walter H. Miller, Jackson county assessor, said he would submit a plan for a county-wide re-assessment of real estate to the county court next Monday or Tuesday.

His decision was made after he conferred with representatives of the Kansas City real estate board and the Forward Kansas City committee.

Mrs. Bomar was 81 years old in February. She was born and reared in Montgomery City, where a brother, Alex Jefferson, still resides and a sister, Mrs. Kathryn Avery lives in Troy, Missouri.

Married fifty-four years ago to Rev. Bomar, their golden wedding anniversary was a quiet event, of four years ago. She was the mother of five children of whom two sons, William Bomar, of Toronto, Canada and Thomas J. Bomar of Miami, Florida, are left with the father. The latter son was with his mother, early in her illness, and returned for the funeral.

Eleven years ago, the daughter Mrs. Everett Morris, died, leaving four young daughters, whom Mrs. Bomar reared. There are eight other grandchildren. Mrs. Bomar was a woman of proven convictions. As a member of the Baptist church she gave ardent support to the doctrines and was a most consistent aid to Mr. Bomar's ministry. She was known for her cheerfulness and wit and for kindly neighborliness and generosity. She was a lineal descendant of Thomas Jefferson. Rev. and Mrs. Bomar had lived in Tipton some eighteen years, having resided in Kansas City and Versailles prior to that. Many friends from there attended the funeral.

Philatelic Exhibit at Fair Has Been Greatly Enlarged

Two State Stamp Clubs To Meet Here; Poster Stamp Issued

Almost a hundred years ago the first postage stamp came into existance and use. Little did the originator imagine that it also was the beginning of a hobby that today numbers its adherents among all ages. There is hardly an individual that sometime in his life has not been fascinated by the story that lies in the collection of these bits of adhesives.

To the ardent stamp collector there is no limit to the study that his hobby holds. Conquest, romance, transportation in all its forms, religion, customs, peoples, history past and in the making, all lend their appeal in the passing parade to the philatelist.

In recognition of this "King of Hobbies and Hobby of Kings," the Philatelic Exhibition at the 39th annual Missouri State Fair has been greatly enlarged to take care of the added interest.

Premium Increase

With twenty-five classifications, including four Junior awards, a substantial increase in premiums and a grand prize of $10 to the best exhibit in any class, plus larger quarters in the Hobby building, the biggest and best show in the fair's existence is expected.

For the first time poster stamps have been issued commemorating the philatelic exhibition. A reproduction appears with this article. Many collectors prize these souvenirs of the different exhibits, which makes an interesting collection and hobby in itself, and will avail themselves of the opportunity to secure one.

Enthusiasm among collectors is demonstrated by the fact two of the many prominent philatelic organizations in the state have already announced their intention to hold meetings at the exhibition during the week.

State Conclave Here

The Missouri Philatelic Society, with William O. Beasley, Carthage, president, and Don Houseworth, St. Joseph, secretary, will hold their conclave August 19 and 20, which promises a good representation of Missouri philately by Missouri's own club at Missouri's own exhibition.

The Missouri Pre-Cancel Club's semi-annual "Mulefest," the club's state-wide meeting, will conduct a two-day get-to-gether on the same dates, with annual election of officers on the program.

The Sedalia Philatelic Club will also be well represented in the week of exhibits and programs.

Collectors' Banquet

A banquet on the grounds on the evening of the first day for all collectors will be attended not only by the above clubs' members but by all other vistiing collectors.

The greater number of exhibits will lend a variety to the show that will be educational to both collector and non-collector. To mention one, there is the exhibit of Mrs. Noel Conaway of San Angelo, Tex., which is called "The Stamp Circus." It is a clever arrangement of stamps that must be seen to be appreciated and has aroused much favorable comment wherever shown. In addition will be other stamp specialties, covers and philatelic material, the nature and arrangement of which collectors have not divulged.

The philatelic exhibit will be the gathering place of those interested in the hobby and all its branches, not only from within Missouri's borders, but from many other states.

Anyone desiring information relative to the exhibit may address Charles O. Botz, Philatelic superintendent, Missouri State Fair, Sedalia.

Nucleus Shape Is Discovered

NEW YORK, July 29.—(AP)—The shape of the Nucleus, or center, of an atom, the first ever measured, was announced today at Columbit University.

The form is that of a football one five-trillionth of an inch long. It stands on end and spins like a top with a speed of millions of revolutions a second.

The shape is a surprise. Scientists had thought that an atomic nucleus was probably spherical. The discovery is potentially important for solving the mystery of how matter is formed. It indicates that motion is one of the properties of all matter as well as of life.

The nuclei of atoms contain 99 per cent of the mass of all the matter in the universe. This includes living matter and man himself. Ability to measure the shape of this "packing crate" is considered a great scientific achievement.

Street Kept Disposal Of Risk Funds Secret

CHICAGO, July 29—(AP)—A special commissioner investigating alleged fraud in the Missouri fire insurance rate compromise left Chicago today with the testimony of 19 insurance executives who swore they had no knowledge of what the late Charles R. Street did with funds they said he collected from 137 insurance companies in 1936.

In imprisoning Thomas J. Pendergast, Kansas City political boss, and R. Emmet O'Malley, former Missouri insurance superintendent, for evasion of income taxes, the federal government charged Street paid Pendergast $315,000 and O'Malley $62,500 for agreeing to the compromise.

Loses Finger In Pulley Accident

A glove he was wearing got caught in a pulley, causing the end of his left index finger to be pulled off, and the third finger to be broken.

He is at the Bothwell hospital.

C. F. Scotten, guest speaker, presented many interesting facts concerning the state of Missouri. He said in part:

"Missouri is known as the 'Mother of the West,' and also as 'The Mother of Antiquity,' for the Ozarks rose from the sea ten millions of years before other portions of North America. Prehistoric animals roamed the state, the skeletons of which are now preserved in Washington university, St. Louis and the University of Missouri at Columbia.

"Missouri was the home of the Mound Builders. Several thousands of their mounds have been found in the state. Weapons, tools and pottery have been found in the mounds and are on exhibit at the Jefferson Memorial, Forest Park, St. Louis."

Interesting facts were related about the Indians, early explorers and the settlements.

The history of the state's capitols was given in some detail. The value of the natural resources and agriculture was emphasized. Missouri is not only rich in natural resources, but also in human resources, for we have produced our share of illustrious men and women. Mark Twain, Eugene Field, Pershing, Lindbergh and others were commented upon.

Senate Thrift Bloc Cuts 850 Million From Lending Bill

Interference With Private Business Hit

Economy Sentiment Spreads; Measure Already Sliced

WASHINGTON, July 29— (AP) — The Senate approved tonight, 45 to 24, an amendment to the administration's $1,640,000,000 lending bill designed to prevent government interference with existing private enterprise.

Soon after adopting this proposal by Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), the chamber agreed to limit debate on the lending measure and recessed until Monday.

The agreement, limiting senators to 15-minute speeches, was obtained by the administration leadership after many previous attempts to hasten a vote had proved futile.

Mood For Reduction

Sentiment for reduction of the lending program spread from the Senate to the House Banking committee during the day, bringing about an $850,000,000 reduction in the measure at that group's hands.

The banking committee recommended House passage of a curtailed bill carrying a total of $1,950,000,000.

The bill before the Senate already had been cut down, by a coalition of Republicans and Democrats, to $1,640,000,000. When first introduced by administration leaders, the legislation carried $2,800,000,000.

Before it recessed, the Senate accepted by a voice vote an amendment by Senator Tydings (D-Md.) to prohibit political contributions by labor unions or other organizations except with the foreknowledge of their members.

Tydings indicated during debate that the amendment was aimed at such loans as the $470,000 advance made the Democratic party in 1936 by John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers.

Hours-Long Debate

Acceptance of the O'Mahoney proposal came after hours-long debate, during which Senator Norris (Ind.-Neb.) charged its practical effect would be "to make it absolutely impossible for a municipality to construct an electric light plant."

The O'Mahoney amendment provides that none of the proposed $350,000,000 of public parks loans could go for projects in any field which private enterprise already was serving adequately. It provides also, however, that if the owners of a private business refuse a "reasonable" public offer to purchase, then government funds could be used for the construction of a competing enterprise.

O'Mahoney, chairman of the government's monopoly investigating committee, told the Senate that "there is no solution" to the nation's business ills along the course of relief pending.

Tells Story Of Terror On Sinking Ship

ner of the Bokuyu Maru "knocked out" Capt. S. Amano, put a life preserver on him and threw him overboard because the captain had refused to leave the ship. They were the last three aboard. Several children also were thrown overboard and picked up.

Most Were Japanese

The Bokuyu Maru was en route from Chile to Yokohama via San Pedro, carrying a cargo of nitrates and 219 passengers and crew members. Most of those aboard were Japanese. Some were Hindus.

The Florida Maru, which was 120 miles further from the stricken ship than the Associated, met the rescue ship the next morning and the 209 passengers were transferred.

"These boys (on the Associated) did a fine job," Captain Hawkins said. "All of my officers and crew overdid themselves to be courteous and helpful."

Asked what he thought happened to the missing child, Captain Hawkins said, "I saw a big shark right there."

Activity Scenes On Farm Tour

In the top picture, the farm tour paused at the P. S. Read farm to examine the results of bindweed eradication with sodium chlorate. The bare spot of ground the touring farmers are standing on is the plot where the bindweed was killed. J. U. Morris, Pettis county agent, is explaining the method used. In the picture below, the tour examines farm pond on the J. C. Longan farm, which is used for livestock and for soil conservation.

Pettis Farm Tour Examines Five Different Homesteads

Mr. Wilkerson has built a diversion ditch to control the water off the slope from going down on cultivated land.

Next farm visited was the J. C. Longan farm, another well-arranged homestead where the yard had been enlarged to give the house a better setting. Mrs. Longan described how her family had spent many years working to give their house a more attractive surrounding. She said that the whole yard program had been a family affair.

The Longan's farm pond, for stock and soil conservation, was also viewed. The pond is fenced to keep livestock out and water from the pond is piped to a stock tank. The pond will make a place for recreation and could also serve as a wildlife refuge.

Bindweed Eradication

The eradication of a plot of bindweed was strikingly shown at the P. S. Read farm. J. U. Morris, Pettis county extension agent, explained that the area of bindweed was staked in 1938, before the surrounding wheat plot had matured.

When staking it, care was taken to stake six to 10 feet beyond the area where the bindweed was found. When Mr. Read harvested his wheat that year, he was careful not to cut in the staked area.

Then the infested plot was cut, left to dry and burned. After this it was left alone for a short while and then marked off in areas one rod square. Three pounds of sodium chlorate was carefully applied to each square rod.

The bindweed was 99 per cent killed by this process and it was hard to find any new plants on the treated area. The few remaining clusters will be treated again soon.

Also on the Read farm, the tourists saw examples of planting on the contour, first and second year sweet clover and flax. Mr. Coleman, commenting on a field of Atlas Sorgo, said that because of heavy yields it was a heavy feeder. He also emphasized its importance as a drouth resistant crop and said that experiments indicate it should be put in the silo when just past the milk and going into the dough stage, for best results.

Final stopping place of the tour was the Olen Monsees farm. Mr. Monsees is growing a large acreage of small grain, including wheat, barley and oats, with lespedeza.

On one 10-acre field, he planted small grain and lespedeza. After the grain was harvested, Mr. Monsees used the lespedeza for pasture and during an 18-day period this 20 acres of lespedeza has afforded pasture for 54 Holstein cattle, with 32 cows in milk.

The cows thrive on this, it was reported. During the 18-day period, the 32 cows produced 20,000 pounds of milk, increasing their production at the rate of 150 pounds per day since coming off permanent pasture onto the lespedeza. This, despite the fact the permanent pasture on the Monsees farm is above average.

Results On Another Field

On another 13-acre field, Mr. Monsees planted barley and lespedeza. He harvested 24 bushels of barley, cut 15 tons of good quality lespedeza hay and still has enough lespedeza left to reseed itself next year.

Besides Mr. Morris and Mr. Coleman, other extension experts on the tour included Miss Dorothy Bacon, home demonstration agent; William Murphy, assistant county agent; William Coleman, Columbia, of the soil conservation service; John S. Baker, conservationist at the Veterans CCC camp being started here, and C. P. Thompson ,engineer at that camp.

Demonstration On Kitchens

A kitchen demonstration was given by the Ionia Homemaker's club at the home of Mrs. L. A. Marsh, Tuesday. Mrs. Marsh told how her kitchen which is ten by twelve, had no built in cupboards, all water had to be carried up six steps from an outside cistern, trips to the basement had to be made to an outside entrance, down these steps and across the rear of the house. In improving her kitchen, first she installed a pump and sink, then space which had been used for a wood box and storage was converted into a built-in cupboard, a hole was cut in the floor and steps made to the basement, to make additional working space a table top with removable legs was hinged to the wall. This can be hooked up against the wall when not in use. By using scrap lumber found about the place all this improvement was made for $13.63 and a very unhandy kitchen is transformed into a pleasant work room.

The business meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. Albert Miller. Members answered roll call by giving some traffic rule, the observance of which would lessen accidents.

At the noon hour lunch was served cafeteria style, each member contibuting a dish.

Following lunch the Jolly Stitchers Sewing club with Mrs. Spencer Miller as leader demonstrated the making of a tea towel. The girls in the club are Eunice Christian, Alice Brockman, Shirley Ragar and Nadine Compton.

Iola Friedley and Lucile Brown, representing the Queen's of the Kitchen 4-H Cooking club demonstrated the making of a sour cream devil's food cake.

Betty Jane Kreisler in a very interesting manner reviewed Wm. Danforth's book "I Dare You."

The August meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Clarence Neil the fifth Tuesday in August being postponed a week because of the State Fair.

Two Local Pitchers Sign Contracts For Major League

Blaine And Schrik Accept Contracts Browns-Yankees

Other Local Players Under Watchful Eyes Of League Scouts

Baseball players who have been with the Sedalia Merchants during this season, have attracted more attention by major league scouts than anytime since the Gold Bug Days. Two pitchers have been signed, Marvin Blaine with the St. Louis Browns and Al Schrik with the New York Yankees.

Probably more attention will be brought to Sedalia through the signing of Blaine than Al Schrik although Schrik has played more baseball with the Merchants. Blaine claims Sedalia and Knob Noster as his home towns, while Schrik merely came to Sedalia on Sundays from Warrensburg to do twirling for the Merchants.

Charles Stis, scout for the St. Louis Browns, was very much impressed with the pitching of Blaine during the Semi-Pro tournament held here two weeks ago, in which he beat the Cash Bargain Lumber Co., 5-1 allowing but four safe hits.

Al Schrik had been given much attention by other scouts. Finally he agreed to attend batting practice with the Kansas City Blues last week. At that time Bill Essick, scout for the New York Yankees, was there to give him the once over. Essick lost no time in getting Schrik's name on the dotted line.

Blaine is eighteen years old, and like Schrik is attending the Central Missouri Teachers' college at Warrensburg. Blaine is two years younger than his fellow classmate. Both are deeply interested in athletics, and both were members of the Mules basketball team of the teachers' college.

A Good Record

Blaine has had a good record, last season he first came into prominence in baseball in central Missouri when he pitched a no-hit game against Green Ridge, doing mound duty for the Knob Noster ball club. During the same season he defeated the Warrensburg Teachers twice, Green Ridge twice, Clinton twice, Windsor one game and La Monte one game.

This year he lost one game out of three complete games with the Sedalia Merchants. The Cash Bargain Lumber Co., being one win and the other being against the Iberia Bears, the one lost game was to the Eldorado Springs team 4 to 2 allowing six hits in this game.

In the other games, Cash Bargain, Sedalia won 5 to 1, Blaine pitched four innings allowed two hits, having relieved Schrik.

Schrik Outstanding

Schrik has pitched a number of games with the Merchants and his record is very good. Especially was his game against the Garavelli ball club of St. Louis which he allowed four hits and no runs, Sedalia winning 1 to 0. Other games Sedalia won and pitched by Schrik: Iberia 14-0, allowed two hits; K. C. Firemen 3-0, allowed three hits; Higginsville 9 to 1, allowed four hits; Rich Hill 6 to 1, allowed six hits; Sugar Creek 2-1, allowed seven hits. Other games pitched and innings: Cash Bargain Lumber Co., five hits in four innings; Eldorado Springs, one inning, no hits; Lebanon Oilers, six innings, three hits; K. C. Firemen, five innings, five hits; Iberia Bears, five innings, four hits; Marshall Merchants, two innings, no hits. He lost the Branson Slugger game in the tournament 6 to 2 allowing seven hits.

He also was named on the All-MIAA conference basketball team the past season, being one of the outstanding players on the Warrensburg team representing the teachers' college.

In four recently won games Schrik has averaged eleven strikeouts per game.

Amateur Standing O. K.

Blaine's contract with the Browns is so arranged it will in no way affect his amateur standing and it will be possible for him to continue playing basketball this season at the teachers' college. It was this reason he refused two previous contracts, and the last was such, after consulting with officials in the MIAA he was assured the contract would not in any way affect his amateur standing.

According to the information Blaine has received, he will report to Springfield, Ill., next Spring and go into training there, while Schrik has not been assigned definitely as yet. The fact Schrik is a southpaw gives him a good chance for a hurried advancement.

Blaine is a right hand pitcher and is developing very good control over the ball. He probably will remain in the minors for a year or two before being advanced into the Brown lineup. However, it was said, in view of the fact the Browns are short good pitchers the youngsters now being signed have an excellent opportunity of making a quick entry into the major league.

Blaine is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Blaine of Knob Noster. His father is the proprietor of the Sedalia Mill Products company, 400 West Main street.....

Scouts Watching

The eyes of the Scouts are watching several other players on the Sedalia Merchants team according to information received in Sedalia the past few days.

Slayton is being given consideration due to his increase in batting the last few games in which he has shown improvement on his batting. Although his average is low, he has been displaying somewhat of a better batting eye lately.

Taylor likewise is doing better and his fielding has brought the attention of the scouts who believe they can help his hitting should he get contract thoughts.

Another outfielder who has been leading the whole team this season and given all of the players some average to shoot at is Zey. Zey who runs the right-field for the Merchants is hammering out at .412 batting average. Charley Stis has a cocked eye on him.

Manager Vincent Siegel says he has been informed as soon as Carver gets his timing down at the plate, he need not write but to wire the youngster is ready for major league tutoring.

Batting Averages

The following are a few of the batting averages of the Merchants players giving the times at the plate and their hits. The first figure is the official times at plate, the next are hits, then averages:

Zey	85	35	.412
Overfelt	77	26	.338
Walker	74	24	.324
Carver	46	15	.320
Slayton	72	21	.291
Taylor	76	22	.290
Livengood	89	24	.269

Boston Blows, Browns Win

Four-run Rally In Fifth Inning Gives St. Louis Lead

BOSTON, July 29—(AP)—Scoring four runs in the fifth inning when Boston's Lefty Jake Wade blew up, the last-place St. Louis Browns handed Boston its third straight setback today. The score was 4 to 3.

Wade, seeking his first victory of the season, had the situation under control until the fifth. Then Joe Glenn and John Bernardino slashed out singles. With two out, Wade gave up three passes in a row and to force in two runs.

The other two runs followed, when, with the bases still jammed, Joe Grace greeted relief pitcher Jack Wilson with a double along the left field foul line.

The Red Sox were shut out for six innings before singles by Joe Vosmick, Jimmy Tabor, Doc Cramer, and Bobby Doerr produced two runs.

In the eighth, the Sox made their final run. Teddy Kramer, of the Browns, and walked Tabor after Vosmik sacrificed. Howard Mills succeeded Whitehead as Leo Nonnenkamp stepped to the plate.

Nonnenkamp was yanked immediately and Boze Berger, batting for him, struck out. Tommy Carey, pinch hitting for Johnny Peacock, was hit on the right elbow, forcing in Williams. Doerr flied out to end that frame.

The Sox threatened again in the ninth but Mills spiked their big guns. Kramer got credit for the victory.

Parker-McNeill To Battle For Tennis Crown

They Will Also Play As Team In Doubles Champion Title

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 29.—(AP)—Twenty - three - year - old Frankie Parker, whose newly developed forehand drive has brought him victory in six of seven tournaments this year, and Don McNeill, just returned from a successful European tennis junket, won their way into the final round of the 52nd annual Seabright tennis tournament today.

McNeill continued to show a fine disdain for the tournament seedings by scoring a straight three-set victory over Bryan M. Grant, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga., 7-5, 6-2, 6-1. Parker came through the hard way by outlasting Gilbert A. Hunt, Jr., of Washington, D. C., 3-6, 6-4, 6-0, 1-6, 6-1.

Parker and McNeill, neither of whom has ever before reached the ultimate round of this 52-year-old tourney, will meet tomorrow for the title lost by Robert L. Riggs of Chicago.

McNeill, Kenyon College junior from Oklahoma City, Okla., is ranked at No. 13 and unseeded. He played near-perfect tennis to rout his 29-year-old rival, sixth ranking in the United States and third seeded here.

The first Seabright champions to be crowned were Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of Cambridge, Mass., and Helen Hull Jacobs of Berkeley, Calif., who captured the women's doubles title today by defeating Franco-American combination of Mme. Sylvia Henrotin and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, 6-3, 6-3.

The single finalists, Parker and McNeill, entered the doubles final as a team, defeating John Hope Doeg of Rumson, N. J., and Gardnar Mullay of Coral Gables, Fla., 4-6, 6-0, 9-7, 6-3, largely through their better control and court strategy.

Opposing them in tomorrow's final, which may have an important bearing upon the selection of the United States Davis cup doubles team, will be C. Gene Mako of Los Angeles and Wayne Sabin of Porland, Ore. They fought an uphill battle after losing the first set and trailing 1-4 in the second to beat the Wimbledon champions, Riggs and Elwood Cooke of Porland, Ore., 4-6, 10-8, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4.

Mexico Cubs Meet Sedalia Bees Today

The Mexico Cubs, colored team from Mexico, Mo., will come to Sedalia today to meet the Sedalia Bees, local colored team on the Hubbard park diamond. The game will start at 3:15 o'clock.

Mexico this season has played fifteen games, losing two, while the Bees have battled out eleven games with no losses.

Batteries: Mexico, Fry and Gardner; for Sedalia, Campbell and Kelly.

IT is very interesting to tell owners of baseball clubs, football coaches, fight promoters, and soforth, how to make money or how to gather the favoritism. I now take a rather mild shot at the American Association as a whole.

Members of a baseball team cannot be blamed entirely for their actions, as they are merely hired hands. The officials and board of directors tell 'em how to run things when it comes to the money matters.

Many times the fans call the players "tight wads, chislers, and what-have-you," when in reality the business manager and officials are the real parties deserving the razzing.

Recently I had an opportunity to see the Kansas City Blues beat Indianapolis. At that time three home runs were made with the balls clearing the left field fence, and six fould tips went into the stands. What happened? Yes the ushers in their bright orange coats rushed out to where the ball dropped and demanded it's return. Yes, they even ran to the back fence and demanded the kids to return the balls which went over, not even inviting the ball grabber into the game but left him roosting in the trees or on the top of a bill board.

The reaction of many fans was that the Blues are sure tight with their baseballs. While up in the National and American League, the fould tips, home runs and other balls which land in the stands, become permanent possession of the lucky persons who got the ball.

One might say on the other hand it certainly is a costly procedure to let the balls get away. Yes it would be very costly. Possibly result in the club in each town losing approximately an average of twelve balls a game. On the other hand it would be the best good will advertising a ball club could get. At the most the cost would not run over $2,000 a year.

Certainly the big league teams figure the loss of one ball might mean the return of several dollars in the future in attendance by one person lucky enough to have obtained a ball.

IT might be well to suggest this to each American Association baseball club and to the Association officers themselves. Every time a ball is foul tipped into the stands, goes over the fence or into the stands for a home run, let the lucky person who gets the ball keep it.

Then each ball could be autographed by the batter who sent it into the stands. The lucky holder being given the opportunity to walk down to the club dug-out, presenting the ball to the player and let him sign it.

Every ball which goes over the fence can be taken to the gate and the lucky holder admitted to the game, given permission to go to the dug-out and have the slugger put his 'John Henry' on it.

I am sure it will give the baseball fans a better impression of the baseball players, rather than sending some big bully down to demand the ball's return, and in some cases getting a Great BIG Policeman to help retrieve it.

No doubt the baseball would be displayed to many persons who would in all probability get interested, go out and see a game. One admission will almost pay for the lost ball.

I have been told on good authority the same practice is made in every Association Park as was exhibited at the Ruppert Stadium in Kansas City the past week.

If the Knot Hole gangs in the world cannot build up the ill feeling of a possible 2,000 disgruntled fans who have had a baseball taken away from them during a season.

Two Straight For Brooklyn

Thirty Thousand See Cardinals Beaten By Dodgers 7-3

ST. LOUIS, July 29—(AP)—Luke Hamlin registered his 11th victory of the season today as he pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to their second straight triumph over the Cardinals, by 7-3.

That dropped the Cards to fourth place, just a game and a half ahead of the Dodgers.

The game was witnessed by 30,040—with children and ladies admitted free.

Hamlin gave up eight hits, one more than the Dodgers could get off four Card pitchers. Ernie Koy's homer in the fifth with two mates on base was the strongest blow struck by the Brooklyns.

Reds Stretch League Lead

Eleven and Half Game Lead; Defeat Phillies Two Straight Games

CINCINNATI, July 29.—(AP)—The Reds stretched their league lead to 11½ games today, combining brilliant hurling by rookie Gene Thompson and heavy hitting, including successive homers by Billy Myers, to sweep a double bill from Philadelphia, 3 to 0 and 9 to 2.

A 6 to 5 win over Boston put the Pirates in second place while Chicago, in dropping a 5 to 2 decision to New York, slipped to third.

The second game marked the twelfth straight time and the 13th in 14 starts that the cellar-dwelling Phils had bowed to the Reds.

Myers' twin-homer performance came in successive trips to the plate in the sixth and eighth frames of the nightcap.

Merchants In Doubleheader This Afternoon

Horner And Hoffman Expect To Have Pitchers' Battle

A double header is scheduled at the Liberty park this afternoon between the Sedalia Merchants and the Higginsville Athletics, the opener to be called at 1 o'clock and the second game to follow about 2:45 o'clock.

The Merchants have defeated the Athletics once in the three game series. The first game was a 9 to 1 victory, while the two games this afternoon will complete the series.

Vincent Siegel, manager of the Merchants, declared Saturday night that he was expecting a pitcher's battle in one of the games with Hoffman, ace twirler of Higginsville on the mound for the Athletics and Horner on the mound for the Merchants.

Hoffman is well known here, having played with the Merchants several times this season. He has declared it a pleasure to return on an opposing team to meet his former team mates.

Gene Horner, home for a rest period from the Louisiana State league, will oppose Hoffman. Horner pitched a two hit game last week against the Brookfield Merchants with Sedalia winning 1 to 0.

Sullivan will pitch for the Merchants in the other game while P. Fox or Ellis will pitch for Higginsville. On the receiving end Simon will be behind the plate for the Merchants, while Hord will handle the Athletics receiving work.

The tentative lineups will be: Higginsville Athletics — Simmons first base; Weigers, second base; C. Inman, shortstop; Trigg, third base; Spears, left field; M. Inman, centerfield; Mabary, right field; Kidd or Hord catch; Hoffman, Fox or Ellis pitch.

For the Merchants — Livengood first base; Light, second base; Walker, shortstop; Taylor, third base; Overfelt or Carver, left field; Slayton centerfield; Zey, right field; Simon or Overfelt catch; Horner or Sullivan, pitch.

Umpires for the game will be Rugen and Barnes.

Szwedko Wins Public Golf Title

MT. PLEASANT CLUB, Baltimore, July 29—(AP)—Brawny, 32-year-old Andy Szwedko, Pittsburgh steel mill worker, tonight wore the national public links crown but there were moments late in the sultry, cloud-blanketed afternoon that the finger of destiny appeared to be pointing toward Slim, 22-year-old Phil Gordon of Oakland, Calif.

Szwedko defeated the Californian 1 up on 36 holes. After watching a three-hole lead almost vanish before Gordon's spectacular rally that brought cheers and heart-throbs to a gallery of more than 5,000.

They had completed the morning round all square, each carding 73, one over par.

The tall, well-holstered Pittsburgher started out in the afternoon like he was going to smother his slight rival by sheer size and power. With birdies trickling off his clubs he forged to a three-hole lead at 27.

Gordon, methodical to the point of exasperation, then made his brilliant bid, a bid which brought him a last-nine medal card of 34, two under par, but couldn't bring him victory.

He won the 30th with a birdie, his 20-foot putt billiarding off Szwedko's ball into the cup. He lost the 31st to a birdie, but took the 32nd and 33rd, the first of the two with a birdie, to be only one down.

The new champion thus finally crashed the portals after four previous attempts.

This Week In Missouri History

FIRMIN ANDREW ROZIER
Southeast Missouri Politician, Banker, and Mine Operator

Born at historic old Ste. Genevieve on July 31, 1820, one hundred and nineteen years ago this week, Firmin Andrew Rozier became a prominent mining operator and promoter as well as a politically important individual in southeast Missouri.

A member of one of the oldest and most prominent families in southeastern Missouri, this Creole was the son of Ferdinand Rozier, founder of the family in America. Ferdinand Rozier, who was born in France, came to Missouri with the famous ornithologist, John James Audubon, in the early 1800's. Young Firmin A. Rozier, his son, was educated at St. Mary's College in Perry County, then one of the leading schools in the Mississippi valley. Although he left school at the age of seventeen to become a clerk on the Vandalia, a steamboat operating between St. Louis and New Orleans he soon engaged in business and began reading law in the office of Boby and Hutton. Later he was graduated from the law school of Transylvania University in Kentucky and was admitted to the bar in Missouri. He married Mary Valle, descendant of another old and noted Ste. Genevieve family, in 1850.

At the age of twenty-five Rozier had attained some prominence in politics and had developed an abiding interest in the geography of southeast Missouri, another field in which he became rather well known. In 1845 he was a delegate to the Southwest Convention at Memphis, Tennessee, presided over by John C. Calhoun. At this convention Rozier made a report and presented a topographical map of the lowlands of southeast Missouri. This map and report were enthusiastically received and attracted considerable attention outside of the convention.

Defeated In 1850

A Benton Democrat, Rozier was defeated by John F. Darby in the congressional race in 1850. One year later he was elected mayor of Ste. Genevieve, a city that virtually controlled the mineral trade in southeast Missouri. There he also established in 1854 an academy for boys, which was maintained largely through his efforts and support. He was elected to the Missouri legislature in 1856. Two years later, when a branch of the Merchant's Bank of St. Louis was established in Ste. Genevieve, Rozier was made its president.

For many years he engaged in lead, zinc, and coal mining operations in Jefferson and St. Francois counties in Missouri and also in Illinois. As a member of the State senate in the 27th and 28th general assemblies, 1873 and 1875, Rozier worked to promote the mining interests of the State. He was chairman of the committee on mines and mineralogy, and introduced the bill which authorized the publiction of the works of Pumpelly and Broadhead, State geologists. In 1875, when the Bureau of Geology and Mines was merged into the School of Mines at Rolla, Rozier was one of those who opposed the unification, placing a high evaluation on the work done by the bureau. It was during the discussion of the question to abolish the bureau that he made one of his most noted speeches, offering a substitute provision which would grant, among other things, an appropriation of $10,000 to support the institution and to encourage science in Missouri.

Rozier was the author of a History of the Early Settlement of the Mississippi Valley, published in 1890, a contribution to the historical literature of the State.

Senator Rozier was tall, commanding and well-proportioned, with keen sparkling eyes that peered from beneath heavy brows with a merry twinkle. His general appearance was altogether striking. He was an important personage in the political and business life of southeast Missouri, and his rigid sense of honesty and justice are almost proverbial. Firmin Andrew Rozier died at Ste. Genevieve on February 11, 1897.

The Rozier name, still widely known and respected as that of one of the prominent commercial families in southeast Missouri, is carried today in public life by George A. Rozier, a Perryville lawyer and one of the outstanding members of the Missouri State Senate. Senator Rozier is the son of Pratt A. Rozier, grandson of Jules R. Rozier, and great-grandson of Ferdinand Rozier.

Short Change Artists Fail

Two would-be short change artists failed in a ruse involving a $5 and a $10 bill at the Producers Exchange, 302 West Main street, Friday evening when J. V. Kesterson Jr., an employe, started to phone the police, and then begged for their money back.

One of the men made an 18-cent purchase, paying with a $10 bill. The second man asked for change for $5 and when they made an apparent maneuver to "switch" bills, Kesterson reached for the phone, grabbing up the money.

The "artists" who seemed confused in their plans, asked for their own bills back, and upon receiving them fled from the store.

They were both described as being about 30 years old, five feet seven in height, one weighing 185 pounds, and the other around 160. Both were wearing dark suits and were bareheaded, Kesterson told the police.

Find Soybean Good As Food

BERKELEY, Calif., July 29—(AP)—Nutrition experts at the Pacific Science congress described the soybean as one of the greatest potential protectors of the poor against the hazards of unbalanced diets and vitamin deficiency.

Dr. A. A. Horvath of the University of Delaware asserted processed whole soya flour "should today be placed at the head of the list of protective foods of high nutritional value, available to the masses of people at low cost."

He said the soybean contained 40 per cent of high grade protein, 20 per cent oil, 2 to 3 per cent of phosphate substances, a liberal supply of calcium, iron, copper and vitamins B-1, B-2 and K.

Sybil Woodruff, Majel McMasters and Helen Klass of the University of Illinois reported that while the bean at present had little to attract the American palate, several hundred new types and varieties were being tested at the university and eighteen of them seemed to offer promise of public acceptance as food.

Country Folk Who Order City Children About Are Not Just "Picking" on Them

Dear Mrs. Summer:

Your question about visiting your husband's family is pretty difficult for me to answer. If I say, "Don't go," I am taking sides. And if I say, "Go ahead," I am still taking sides, you see.

It does seem rather a pity that your children have to miss a good time in the country just for family reasons. I'm sure your mother-in-law don't mean to be too bossy. They probably love the children so much they try to keep them safe.

You know the shortcomings and failures of your little boy and girl, as you say, but you want to reserve the right to correct them and not have the whole shooting-match aiming at them.

I know how you feel, for I went through something like it. I took my two to the country to see an uncle of mine. The first shock I had was when he said, "Keep the children out of the barn, unless you are along. Barns are not for little folk, and yours are too young to know that a calf's kick is dangerous, or that pitchforks aren't playthings."

I thought he was just talking. Then one day he came in as mad as a hornet, leading Mary by the hand. "She was sitting right on the calf," he said. "If it had stood up and let out with its heels against her head, that would have been the end of her."

You see, he knew and I didn't. Another time, after he had warned me not to let the two of them go near the fence enclosing the hog pen, I thought it was amusing to see them offer apples through the wire. An old boar was heading for us, his little red eyes gleaming. Just in time my uncle came out of the orchard and pulled the children back. "The hands would have gone with the apples," he said sharply. "These children are far too young to be around animals. They are city children. Country children know more about things."

There were dozens of ways they could have a good time, and they did. I learned to listen.

Must Learn To Take Orders From Strangers

Maybe you are just a little bit too sensitive. Maybe if you would learn the rules, as I finally did, your husband's family would leave everything in your hands.

However, even if they do speak a bit brusquely to the children sometimes, I think it isn't bad for your boy and girl to take a few orders from others. They have to get used to it, you know.

Yours sincerely,
Olive Roberts Barton.

Sex Hormones Given Female Canary Make Her Sing Like Male

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Among the most important of the discoveries of scientific medicine in recent years are those related to the isolation and uses of the specific hormones of the sex glands, both male and female. The work is so new, however, and the difficulties of experimentation so great that actual fact is only beginning to be separated from the results of uncontrolled experiments. Much of the data now being accumulated by experiments on animals is astounding.

It has been found, for instance, that in the opossum the administration of the male sex material, known as testosterone propionate, induces development of a strange medley of the characters of both sexes. There seem, however, to be specific sex factors for various portions of the mechanism in male and female opossums.

When this glandular material is given to rats and mice it has been found that small doses will cause stimulation of the activities of the female sex glands, whereas larger doses given over a long period of time will produce a depression of this activity. In monkeys and in women the giving of the male sex hormone produces a depressing effect on the female sex glands.

* * *

It is generally recognized that singing in canaries is limited to the male and many an expert believes that this is to permit the male to attract the female. In other words, the quality of singing is believed to be associated with a biologic plan.

Investigators in New Jersey recently studied the effects of injecting the male sex hormones into the breast muscles of female canaries and found that in four out of five birds the typical male song was sung by the injected female. One of them began singing after two injections and the others after four injections and the singing was continued for periods of five to 13 days after the last injection, depending on how much of the glandular material was injected. The remaining female canary would not sing a sustained song, but instead strutted on the perch, swelled up the throat and moved about as if singing. However, the sounds that came out were interrupted and resembled only portions of the male song.

Apparently these injections did not have a permanent effect on the reproductive system of the birds because later three of the five birds were mated, built nests and laid eggs.

* * *

It was interesting that the females did not produce as much volume of sound as did the males and the investigators were not able to determine much about the tone quality. However, the range of tones, variations, trills and duration were said to be similar to those of male canaries.

The profound effects of these glandular substances in experiments thus far made, both in animals and in human beings, should indicate the extreme caution necessary in the use of substances of this character.

There were approximately 1,150,000 non-fatal injuries suffered in motor vehicle accidents during 1938.

Approximately 300,000,000 gallons of tax-exempt gasoline are consumed annually by motor vehicles operated by the federal, state, and local governments.

Military aircraft production for the year 1938 increased 95 per cent over the year 1937.

U. S. Merchant Marine Bids for Sea Glory

EIGHTY years ago the American Merchant Marine was the best in the world. Fleet Clipper ships set amazing speed records for sailing vessels, dominated ocean commerce. The American-built Savannah, in 1819, was the first steam-powered ship to cross the Atlantic.

The Civil War, the development of western railroads and westward emigration turned American thoughts from the sea and a generation after the Civil War scarcely 10 per cent of U. S. commerce was borne in American ships.

Today American ships carry a third of the nation's foreign commerce, but the merchant fleet is obsolete. In total tonnage, United States ranks fourth among world powers, behind Britain, Japan and Germany, slightly ahead of Italy and France. In new vessels—10 years old and less—United States ranks last.

The launching of the new super-safe liner America, on Aug. 31, marks the return to glory of the American Merchant Marine. This vessel, the first of 500 in a 10-year program, is the biggest steamer ever built in United States and the safest ship ever constructed. Every means of safeguarding its 1219 passengers have been incorporated into the construction of the 723-foot, 26,000-ton ship.

An American ocean liner is shown on the U. S. 10-cent stamp, enlarged above, brown and black, of the Pan-American series of 1901.

Grains Resume Upward Strides

CHICAGO, July 29.—(AP)—The grain market resumed its recovery stride today, wheat gaining more than a cent a bushel and extending the advance from Monday's 1939 low point to 4 or 5 cents.

The weather map showed the North American spring wheat belt received little or no relief from high temperatures and the aggravated dry spell and traders expressed belief further deterioration occurred. Consuming interests remained in the market for supplies and buying of futures in connection with wheat and flour sales continued to strengthen prices.

Other Grains Advance

Other grains advanced with wheat, closing prices in all pits being at or near the day's highs. Wheat finished ⅝ to 1⅜ cent higher than yesterday. September 65¾c to 64⅞c, December 66⅝c to 66½c; corn ½ to 1 cent up, September 42¼c to 42⅜c, December 42¾c to 42⅞c; oats ¼ to ½ cent higher; rye ½ to ⅞ cent up and lard unchanged to 2 cents lower.

Forecast of cooler weather and possibly showers in the northwest caused selling which eliminated wheat price gains at times. A ⅞ to 1 cent lower close at Liverpool, due partly to selling of July contracts in which trading will cease after Monday, also was an unsettling factor.

More Good Rains

Corn prices dipped about ⅝ cent below yesterday's close at times, reflecting further good rains in the heart of the belt. However, the forecast was for fair and warmer weather. Light arrivals of actual grain and small country selling were strengthening factors. The 12 principal markets received only 2,778,000 bushels this week, 400,000 less than last week and almost 4,000,000 less than a year ago.

Oats and rye advanced with the leading cereals. Shippers were good buyers of oats.

Lard trade was quiet.

Market Prices Edge Downward

NEW YORK, July 29.—(AP)—The stock market today finished a generally shiftless week with prices edging downward.

The list slipped at the start of the brief session and, with the exception of a handful of inactivities, never really got back on its feet. Closing losses were inconsequential for the most part, although a point or so was lopped off here and there.

It was the slowest session in two weeks, transfers for the two hours totalling 245,360 shares against 806,110 last Saturday when the direction was definitely upward. The turnover for the six days was nearly 2,000,000 shares under the preceding week.

Off .2 of a Point

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .2 of a point at 50 and showed a net decline of .4 on the week. A year ago the composite stood at 49.1 and a month ago it was 45.5.

The intense humidity in the financial district resulted in near-deserted boardrooms. Also many traders, seemingly interpreting Friday's lackadaisical proceedings as a tip-off of today's indifference, decided it was hardly worth while putting in an appearance.

Far as news was concerned, it was still more hopeful than otherwise. Sustaining factors for the near-term were seen in the steady flow of favorable corporation earnings statements, mounting department store sales and forecasts next week's steel mill operations again would register a modest advance. Wall Street refused to get excited over happenings in Europe or the Far East.

Among Day's Losers

Among the day's losers were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Anaconda, Westinghouse, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft and Consolidated Edison.

Auditor's Report Shows 15 Missouri Counties Are Broke

Must Either Repudiate Or Consolidate

Neither Alternatives Popular; Can't Meet Obligations

By HOWARD FLIEGER

JEFFERSON CITY, July 28—(AP)—At least 15 Missouri counties are hopelessly bankrupt.

Only these two dubious and highly improbable paths could lead them from their financial woes: Repudiation of all obligations or consolidation with other counties. Neither route is popular or likely.

Investigations made by field men of the state auditor's office—a service now discontinued because of lack of cash—brought to light the harried finances of these counties which purposely were unidentified.

Insurmountable Debt

Their plight resulted from a steady loss of property valuation—basis for their tax structure—and declines in tax collections which left the counties with insufficient money to meet current obligation. Thus a debt mounted annually. Now it is almost out of reach.

State Auditor Forrest Smith used one county as an example: It has outstanding obligations in excess of $100,000. Its annual valuation could produce a maximum of only about $35,000. Thus that county would need three years to get out of debt if it didn't spend a time on current expenses and collected its taxes 100 per cent.

The overdue warrants of such counties frequently go begging, even though they represent the salaries of the county officials. In many instances pay warrants issued by the county can be purchased for 30 cents on the dollar—the buyer staking his money on a gamble that some day, some how, the county will find the money to pay off its debts 100 per cent.

Alternative Solutions

What of the alternative solutions?

Repudiation: No unit of government—municipal or county—wants to welch on its obligations, even though a full repudiation would permit it to start over at scratch. The action would cast a cloud on all its future negotiations and leave no assurance that the same situation wouldn't develop again.

Consolidation: Group consolidations would increase the tax valuations—the income potential—for each governmental unit by bringing in more territory and eliminating needlessly over-lapping jobs. Many government students see this as the only real solution to the financial woes of the hard-pressed rural counties—but they reckon without the jobholders.

A consolidation of four counties, for example, would mean only one job where four jobs grew before. One sheriff for four; one county collector for four. Many constant office-seekers could hardly be counted upon to look kindly on such a program.

Marie Dionne Puts On Weight

CALLANDER, Ont., July 29—(AP)—They've always referred to Marie as the "runt" of the Dionne quintuplets, but no longer can it be said.

She stepped on the scales at an official weighing today and registered 48½ pounds—a half pound heavier than Yvonne who thus becomes the tiniest of the famous sisters.

Marie owes her elevation from the lightweight class, paradoxically enough, to a reducing campaign. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, who ordered a dieting and exercise course for his little charges, found it was just as hard for Marie to lose weight as to gain it.

The weights, with changes since the last weighing a month ago, follows:

	Pounds	Loss
Cecile	51¼	¾
Annette	51	1
Emilie	50½	1¼
Marie	48½	1
Yvonne	48	1¾
